RE: Coronavirus – UA Response to State of Alaska Health Mandates 11 & 12

As discussed yesterday, the following provides a policy-level synthesis of the requirements of the Governor's March 27 Health Mandates. Please implement in your respective administrative units. In addition, it requests that you provide specific information in support of our planned request to the Governor's Office for certain additional exceptions to the Mandates.

Requirements

Mandate - All employees must work remotely with the following exceptions:

Exceptions Require the following Analysis:

Does the employee's function require in-person presence on campus, i.e., tasks cannot be performed remotely?

If tasks do not require in-person presence, the work may not be performed in-person.

If tasks must be performed in-person, on premises work is only permitted if one of the following exceptions apply:

The function must directly support UA's primary exception, i.e., the delivery of Distance Education (support may include certain employees in utilities, IT, payroll, housing and dining, essential maintenance, media, and health and public safety); or

The function must meet other exceptions (e.g., residential facilities, medical services, or other services in support of Distance Education, public health, or other essential services, construction, utilities, financial services, etc.). See governor's list of essential services; or

The function must constitute a "Minimum Basic Operation" as defined in Mandate 11, provided that employees can comply with Social Distancing:

_i. The minimum necessary activities to maintain the value of the payroll and (This should be interpreted as preservation and maintenance activities required for a warm shutdown of non-essential operations.)

“ii. The minimum necessary activities to facilitate employees of the business being able to continue to work remotely from their residences.”

If the function is not covered by one of the exceptions stated above, in-person work is prohibited. Such prohibited functions include:

Delivery of in-person classes (see process for Additional Exceptions below);

However, in person delivery of certain health program classes currently in operation may continue pending further review.

Work in support of in-person classes;

However, computer labs in support of Distance Education will proceed, with required “social distancing” and other protective measures;

Research that does not support essential services and that cannot be conducted from home;

Exceptions:

Animal care and other limited work to ensure ongoing viability and recovery of laboratory and education support facilities;

Essential staffing for functions that are part of specific critical infrastructure or public safety work, such as the Alaska Volcano Observatory, State Virology Lab, Alaska Earthquake Center, Alaska Satellite Facility, National Weather Service and the Wilson Alaska Technical Center; “Minimum Basic Staffing”* for facilities such as R/V Sikuliaq and Toolik Field Station

If any essential in-person tasks are covered by an exception provided above:

A written determination must be provided as soon as practicable to employees required to be on campus that states:

Their function is covered by an exception to the State’s health mandates requiring non-essential business closures/stay at home;

The determination must:

identify the exception;

specify the parts of the function that cannot be performed remotely;

specify the manner in which the functions can be safely performed, including social distancing measures;

That the employee may report to work only to perform those required in-person tasks.

In addition, a written plan must be developed covering anyone working on campus ensuring:

social distancing, and that any intra-community travel (including commuting) ensures the safety of employees, critical infrastru 1 508.02 reW* nBT/F3 12 Tf1 0 0 1 247.25 66 Tm0 g
