U NVrtual arly xplorers arv ng

arv ng avenger unt

xplore arve museum o e ts an go on a s avenger hunt at home

The Museum of the North's collections include many carved objects. Since ancient times, people have carved tools and everyday objects they needed to survive, as well as cultural artifacts and artwork. In Alaska, many carvings are made from antler, wood, soapstone, ivory, or bone.

o on a s avenger hunt

U NVrtual a	rly xplorers arv ng
	Iñupiaq children played with these toy kayaks and umiaks, carved from wood and ivory.
	anyou n a avortetoy
Miniature Kayaks and Umiaks Geist Collection
	This Aleut hunting hat is beautifully decorated.
	n a pretty hat
Full-Crowned Hunting Hat, by Jacob Simeonoff, ED94-2-3
	This carved bone comb was used to straighten bundles of grass.
	n a om to rush har
Grass Comb, Yup'ik, ca. 1880
	This chain was carved out of ivory!
	an you n someth ng that oul e use to te two th ngs together
Chain, Siberian Yup'ik, 1-1939-0738

Imagine that the objects you found around your home are in a museum. What story do they tell about life in your home? Everyday objects can tell us a lot about how people live! Museums collect objects so we can remember how people lived throughout history.

